ported to have said that the reason why CLEVELAND'S treatment of the silver question in his annual message has made so little impression upon the members of the House of Representatives is that a majority of the people are in favor of the continuation of silver coinage. That congressman told the truth, we suspect. If the members of the House of Representatives could in any way be made to believe that a majority of the people were monometallists it would not be long before the United States would come down to a single standard of values.

There is much of dogmatism in the utterances of the monometallists, but there is nevertheless at the bottom of backers if silver coinage had not come their theories a foundation strong to our assistance. We are still, as we enough to give them reasonable support. Discussion will enlighten both bimetallists and monometallists. How true it is that even bankers need information on the questions involved in and so we are not at all alarmed the silver problem, and on other ques- when the monometallists threaten a contions connected with their own calling. is well exemplified in the conduct of rency as a result of conthe bankers of New York at the time tinued silver coinage, nor when the when the present system of national banks was first authorized by act of Congress. Read the following extract the stopping of silver coinage. Nor are the report of a recent interview | we afraid of the operation of GRESwith the venerable JOHN THOMPSON, HAM'S law; for if the inferior currency president of the Chase National Bank drives out the better, then gold must be of New York, who, in conjunction the inferior currency, seeing that the with SALMON P. CHASE and JOHN J. monometallists swear that silver will CISCO, established the present national drive all the gold out of the country, banking system and the national-bank note currency of America :

Again, when I organized the First losophy." would touch the stock, and I was forced to take it all in my own family. Myself and my two sons and son-in-law held the stock, and we brought in one outsider with ten shares to give us the five directors necessary to organize. So it was when we issued the first national-bank note; again I stood alone. The New York clearing-house held a the New York clearing house held a big meeting to talk over the matter, and after a full discussion decided not to have anything to do with such money. They said that no one but a scalawag would touch it. They have changed their indexines then?

"They have changed their minds since then." That tells the story of what they will be compelled to do again other bloody-shirt shriekers? We bewhen in another instance, as in that, they "learn more."

"Up to the present time $220,000,000 has been coined. How much more can be coined before it will affect the standard is a question which a good many minds are studying over."

That's the point upon which the whole difficulty hinges. How many silver dollars can the flat of the Government keep at par with gold? This question was most ably argued several years ago in the Westminster Review. The greenbacks are kept at par with gold by the promise of the Government to their hindsights. A change of Adminredeem them whenever presented in sums not less than so many dollars. The silver dollars are kept at par with gold by what is in effect their redemption by the Government. That is to say, the Government needs several hunyear, and in collecting this revenue reves silver dollars and gold dollars as equal value. They are, therefore, of equal value so far as concerns the paying of certain taxes to the Government. This is practically a process of redemption; for if a New York merchant owing the Government a million of dollars has a million of dellars in gold he can exchange it for a million of dollars in silver, and with the latter pay the debt which it would have required all his million of gold dollars to pay. How long can the Government by thus indirectly redeem-ing the aliver dollars keep these at par with gold? In 1878, we said it could do so until it had coined enough silver cliars to pay all the expenses of the covernment for one year. Is that the est? Who can tail? Can the Governneut thus keep at par with gold a arger or only a smaller sum of aliver han the one we then unsumed to be the maximum sum that could thus be made
